Entertainments.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Manager Bunnell presents at this house this week a triple bill consisting of the marvelous Elliotts, the Kilanyi troupe of living pictures and Eloina, the trapezist. This grand combination furnished a most delightful evening's entertainment. The performance is opened by the Elliotts in their grand bicycle tournament. The family is composed of three beautiful ladies and four gentlemen. The acts which they produce on the bicycle are highly original and startling. Every trick and feat is entirely new. As bicycle and one wheel riders they are the best that have been seen in this city. Senorita Eloina, a remarkable female gymnast, was seen in a very graceful trapeze act which was greeted with loud applause. During the next act of the Elliotts they gave a representation of their famous Russian quadrille. They also rode bicycles and at the same time gave a most excellent exhibition of balancing. They possess great merit, and each act was demanded again and again.

This family also gave a most pleasing musical program, performing on more than fifty musical instruments. Their new musical fantasia, "Sharps, Flats and Naturals," was very entertaining and amusing. No less than thirty tableaux were presented by the Kilanyi troupe. They are so many pictures, and that idea is enforced by the frame which encloses the whole of the single figures and groups. Copies of statuary, such as Venus de Milo, of Medici, and Canova's Diana, are introduced, and living presentations of paintings are included in the tableaux. Each figure, or combination of figures, has an appropriate scenic background, and to quote one instance, the picture having for its subject Daudet's Sappho, in her black dress, at the Paris Grand opera house bal masque, is positively startling in its realistic effect. Another really beautiful picture is "Psyche at the Well." This was last night one of the most favorably received of the whole series. The copy of Bouguereau's "Psyche and Cupid," was another success. In the mechanical sense the tableaux were extremely well managed. The changes were made quickly. There was no delay between them, and the posing of the various figures was artistic in every instance.

The performance will be repeated each evening this week, and should be witnessed by crowded houses. The electric fans did much to add to the comfort of the audience by keeping the house cool, which proved a great boon to the audience.

The various bicycle clubs in the city, The Rovers, Germania, Y. M. C. A., and Ladies' club all had representatives present, being attracted by the fame of the Elliott family, as expert bicyclists and unicyclists.

There will be matinee Wednesday and Saturday.

POLL'S WONDERLAND THEATER.
 The opening at Poll's Wonderland theater yesterday was a grand success. Everybody was surprised at the extent of the alterations and improvements made in the theater, and delighted with the quality of the performance given. The theater is very handsome, in short, highly attractive, and reflects great credit upon Mr. Poll's taste and enterprise.

The performance was particularly good. Sadl Alfarabi, the handsome young Russian, created a lively sensation with his extraordinary feats of balancing and manipulations. Every spectator was astonished and the applause was deafening. After his star trick, in which he balances himself, feet in the air, on four billiard cues, the house rang with applause and Alfarabi was compelled to bow again and again to delighted audiences.

Professor Macart's dog and monkey comedians fairly divided interest with the star. Their comedy tricks were most amusing, especially in the boxing bouts and skirt dancing, and the baboon property man, Babe, did the most astonishing things, giving an exact and faithful representation of the ordinary work of the regular stage property man. In the thrilling fire drama the dogs gave an exact reproduction of firemen subduing a tenement house fire and rescuing a baby from the burning flames, making the production most wonderfully realistic.

The most brilliant luminous effects were created for both Alfarabi and the dogs by means of the new Mayrhofer lamps put in at each side of the stage and in the balcony, and the dancing of the beautiful Saharet was made additionally attractive by means of these effects.

The specialty acts on the bill were all excellent, and the Wonderland has before it a brilliantly successful season.

FELL ON THE TRACKS.

Fell Off East Street Railroad Bridge.

Peter McCarthy, a well known police character, was sent to the hospital from the Grand avenue police station last evening. He had fallen from East street railroad bridge to the tracks below. It was feared that he was internally injured, but beyond a shaking up and several bruises he is all right. He lives on Wallace street.
